You are Too an Artist

Speaker: Terry Waldron

Terry was born in Columbus, Nebraska and got her art degree from the University of Nebraska in Lincoln. She went on to teach high school art and English for 43 years. In 1993, Terry walked into a quilt shop and signed up for a class in quilting. She was hooked. Now, new ideas come nearly everyday for new works of art and she treats every piece she creates like it might be the last one she does. Terry finds teaching a joy and teaching is her favorite thing to do. Talking about quilts is her second favorite thing. Terry has been featured in 7 books, written magazine articles, and has even been featured on Simply Quilts. <http://www.terrywaldron.com>

Exhibition Showcases Nebraska Quilts and Quiltmakers

The International Quilt Study Center & Museum at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will present the exhibition Nebraska Quilts and Quiltmakers from April 8 through October 2, 2011. This exhibition of 15 quilts celebrates the work of the Nebraska Quilt Project team – pioneering individuals who preserved an invaluable record of life in our state, told through the history of cherished quilts.

Twenty-five years ago a dedicated group of 21 volunteers set out to document Nebraska quilts that remained in private hands, fearful that the rich heritage inherent in the family quilts would be lost forever if not documented. The Nebraska quilt project team, in numerous day-long events, collected information on 1,557 quiltmakers who made 3216 quilts between 1870 and 1989. Led by director Frankie Best, the group recorded family stories, photographed each quilt, and gathered background on the quiltmakers, including gender, occupation, ethnicity, religious background, education, and the occasion that prompted a quilt's creation.

Shortly after the results of the state survey were published in an award-winning volume titled Nebraska Quilts and Quiltmakers, Ardis and Robert James began looking for a home for their outstanding collection of nearly 1000 quilts. The James looked to their home state of Nebraska, recognized as a leader in the movement to document quilt history.

Impressed by the quality of the research featured in Nebraska Quilts and Quiltmakers and the level of grass-roots support found among Nebraskans, they proposed that the University of Nebraska-Lincoln was an ideal home for their quilts. The Jameses approached Dr. Patricia Crews, professor of Textiles, Clothing and Design at the University, who was the academic advisor to the project team and co-editor the Nebraska book and asked if the University would be interested in accepting a donation of their collection. In 1997, the Center was formed, as the first academic center devoted to the study of quilts across time and space.

The documentation and research begun by the Nebraska Quilt Project team paved the way for the formation of the International Quilt Study Center & Museum. The museum today is home to a number of the quilts that were featured in the book Nebraska Quilts and Quiltmakers. The quilts were donated by individuals who were inspired by the survey project volunteers to recognize the importance of preserving their family quilt and its provenance.
